Expertise

Montgomery & Andrews' attorneys focus on Employment and Labor Law matters of critical strategic importance to our clients and offer capabilities that leverage the firm's core competencies, particularly in litigation. Our full-service employment law practice represents local, regional and national employers. The Employment and Labor Practice lawyers have deep experience and a long and successful track record of representing clients in every kind of employment lawsuit in both federal and state courts. We effectively represent clients in matters before the full range of U.S. and state employment agencies, including the EEOC, the Human Rights Division, and the Workers' Compensation Administration. Additionally, Montgomery & Andrews attorneys are available to help reduce our clients' risk of employment disputes by advising managers and supervisors on the myriad federal and applicable state employment laws, and are able to assist clients by auditing and counseling on all aspects of the employment relationship, including hiring, retention, performance management, termination and OSHA compliance.
